

Get Party

Pilot Report

We let a variety of users try out our website, some of them use the website as a partier view, and others as a production view. While they were experimenting with the site, we looked from the side and examined how they coped and whether everything was clear.

Below are highlights that they brought up to us and that we learned from their experience:

- It's clear that one should log in to the website to use the main APIs.
- In the Sign-Up form it wasn't clear that you can choose more than one favorite place and music – we changed titles.
- In the search results page, it's clear that you can refilter the fields in place, except there are no search results – added gif.
- Really like the countdown in the live mode of future events.
- Follow production VS like and save event is confusing – changed icons.
- In the Live mode, when an event has ended it's not clear that one can't post a new comment – we removed the field after the end of the event.
- It wasn't clear that clicking the website icon would navigate you to the home page. However, we think this is a general convention, so we have not added a special button for this. In addition, one can navigate the site using the browser's arrows.
- Uploading images in HEIC file format is not supported.
- Added wrong password message in the login process.
- Added show password option and confirmed password in the registration process.
- In the registration process, the "Continue" button can be pressed only by mouse click and not by the Enter button.
